DWELLING PREY TO SPECTACULAR WIRETON BLAZE

Monessen Fire Department Turns Chemicals on Other Property

CARNIVAL PULLS DOWN TENTS

By a spectacular fire which was discovered at about 10:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, a two story frame dwelling opposite the carnival ground above the street railway tracks at Wireton was destroyed, entailing a loss of perhaps $2,000. The fire is supposed to have been started by some one carelessly tossing a half lighted match on the premises. Mrs. Allie Fleming of West Newton owned the dwelling which was unoccupied. Some insurance was carried.

Several weeks ago a fire partly destroyed the building. At that time it was occupied by Italians. Since no one has been living there. Insurance of $400 has just been paid.

A carnival this week is showing on the lot just below the street railway tracks and one theory is that a visitor there threw the disastrous match.

By the heat of the fire and the leaping flames cable of a Bell Telephone line became inflamed and fully 350 feet of it was destroyed. A telephone pole was burned down.

The Monessen fire department was summoned, but the fire had gained such a headway by the time of their arrival that it could not be controlled. Chemicals were used in protection of other property.

The Hunter Shows with tents on the carnival lot were forced because of the flying sparks to take down much of their canvas and to move their property. A high wind raged while the house burned that carried burning embers far and endangered homes nearby.

It is claimed that the father of one of these youngsters twice flew from Denver to Pittsburg, a distance of 1,400 miles. The next race will be held from Newark, Ohio, October 1.

Quarantine to Die With The Midnight Hour

The moving picture shows will come into what they wisely regard as their own, churches and Sunday schools will be rejuvenated, family reunions made possible and all events where juveniles are necessary adjuncts subject to definite arrangement without fear of interruption after tonight. The quarantine which has lasted since August 24 to prevent a general spread of infantile paralysis expires, according to announcement on September 29, which means of course 12 o'clock midnight tonight.

However the quarantine is not to be allowed to die an uninstructed death. Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, state health commissioner says in his closing paragraph of a statement: "It is to be hoped that the public and those particulary in charge of schools and other entertainments that bring children together will remember that the danger has not entirely disappeared. Everything should be done to promote the general health of the children and the parents should continue discipline that will keep them from unnecessary traveling in trolleys and railroad trains or congesting in buildings poorly ventilated."

HUGHES GIVEN BIG RECEPTION

Republican Presidential Candidate Pleases Western Pennsylvanians

CHARLEROI PEOPLE SEE HIM

Charles Evans Hughes, Republican candidate for President received a magnificent reception on his first visit of the campaign to Pittsburg Wednesday. During the afternoon he made a tour of several of the mill towns near Pittsburg in the Turtle Creek and Monongahela valleys. His greatest meeting was held in the evening following a parade terminating at Exposition Hall. Some of the outstanding points in his address were:

"Remember the foundation (of the Federal Reserve Act) is Republican and the materials are largely Republican."

"That (the Underwood tariff bill) instead of being an aid was a body-blow at the business of the United States."

"If our friends on the other side would enact child labor legislation in the States where they have absolute control there would be virtually no child labor problem left in the United States."

"It was not in the Executive discretion * * * to make a personal war on Huerta or to control the internal affairs of Mexico."

"We desire a stable government in Mexico; for the indignities to our flag we cherish no resentment."

"We desire to prepare for peace. Reasonable preparedness, even of a military nature, is preparedness for peace."

"We are not militarists; there is not a corporal's guard in the county for militarism."

"We must have, not only a tariff commission, but a Congress, the majority of which believes in a protective tariff."

"Labor and capital must work together if the United States is to be successful."

"When a situation develops where a fundamental principle is involved, it is the duty of the Executive to stand firm for the principle of American institutions and not to surrender to force from any group, labor or capital."

"We have the principles of freedom —and they are the principles of honest inquiry."

Among those from Charleroi who were in Pittsburg either during the day or evening attracted by the influx of politicians were T. P. Sloan, J. J. Hott, Kerfoot W. Daly and George D. Clark.

STARCHY LOOK IN ORDER TOMORROW FOR YOUNGSTERS

School to Open 1916-17 Sessions After Four Month's Vacation Period—Teachers Enroll Pupils at Different Buildings This Afternoon

Stiff collars and a starchy look will be in order tomorrow morning for Charleroi boys, and their sisters will don their prettiest ready for the beginning of school. This afternoon teachers "started to school." They are at the different buildings enrolling and registering pupils.

Tomorrow morning pupils are to report at the rooms they left at the close of school four long months ago. From these rooms promotions will be made and adjustments reached. The process will be the ordinary one with which every person who ever attended school is familiar. Monday school work will be taken up in regular order according to the classes arranged and lessons asigned at the Friday session. At least this is the program.

No date has been set for the close of school, but it will run pretty well into June in order to complete the nine months term. However there will be a general reduction of holidays both here and elsewhere in order to limit the term.

DONORA LAW VALID SAYS JUDGE IRWIN

Action of Burgess in Fining Socialist Street Speaker is Upheld

CONGESTION IS PREVENTED

In an opinion handed down by the court Wednesday, written by Judge R. W. Irwin the judgment of the burgess of Donora in the case of the borough against Edward Hayden is affirmed at the cost of the appellant, Edward Hayden. This was a suit involving the validity of an ordinance passed by the borough of Donora forbidding public lectures, speeches, meetings and entertaisments on the public streets of that borough. The court sustains this ordinance, holding that it is a valid exercise of the police power of that borough.

The defendant, Edward Hayden, is state organizer for the Socialist party. At the time he was arrested he was engaged in delivering an address on Sixth street that borough, just off McKean avenue, two public thoroughfares of that borough. His arrest was subsequent to other attempts of Mr. Hayden to hold a public meeting on the streets of that borough. The last time he was arrested he was taken before the burgess and fined $50 and costs This he paid under protest.

In appealing from the judgment of the burgess the defendant contended that the ordinance was invalid He averred it inflicted a double penalty, fine and imprisonment; that it is repugnant to the constitutional guaranty of the right of free speech and peaceable assemblage; that it is unreasonable in that it prohibits the exercise of these rights within practically the whole borough limits and is excessive in the amount of the fine and that it is oppressive and discriminatory in character

The court holds that the first objection is well taken but after reviewing the law involved as to this point, the court concludes that the whole ordinance is not invalid because it provides both fine and imprisonment. As to the second objection the court says there is nothing in the ordinance prohibiting the exercise of the right of free spech.

The court finds that the sole purpose of the ordinance is to prevent congestion of the streets of the borough in interference with traffic by holding public meetings or entertainments upon the streets.

As to the fine being excessive the court quotes the act of June 4, 1887, which limits the fine and penalty for any single violations of an ordinance to $100. Therefore the court says, it cannot hold that this fine was excessive.

WAR AND THE FARMER

Does the farmer profit by the European war? [illegible] prices, [illegible] the manufacturers who have [illegible] thereby. Of course, everyone knows that when times are good and the factories are running full time and paying good wages, there is a good demand for the products of the farm, but few realize the amount of food stuffs which it takes to feed the great European armies and those industrial armies whose entire time is devoted in Europe to manufacturing munitions of war. The figures throw some light on the question. During the first two years of the war the United States sold to the belligerents gunpowder, cartridges, explosives and firearms to the value of $523,000,000.

But sold to them food stuffs to the value of $1,938,000,000, or nearly four times as much, measured in value, as of actual munitions of war. Can any intelligent man fail to appreciate what this has meant to the farmers of this country? Why, the value of the experts of food stuffs was sufficient to pay a net profit of $300 a year on 6,666,000 farms. When the war needs the 30,000,000 men now fighting and making ammunition in Europe will return to their normal pursuits. Now they are only consumers of food stuffs. Then a large percentage of them will become producers as well. The farmer is, therefore, as vitally interested in industrial preparedness as the mechanic and the artisan.

SHARING RESPONSIBILITY

After contemplating the number of near automobile acidents that have been of common occurrence on down town streets and crossings, one is compelled to wonder wherein the borough could be held responsible, if at all, should the expected happen.

For instance suppose at the corner of Fifth street and Fallowfield an aged woman or a child should be run down and killed by an automobile traveling at a high rate of speed in starting the ascent of the hill. Quick dodging has prevented many an accident like this. Naturally you would expect the driver to be blamed and a few might conclude the victim was responsible. But wouldn't there be a stain on the borough's clean pages?

The laws do not grant the right of drivers to exceed a well defined limit of speed. If municipalities do not carefully regulate traffic or insist upon a consistent observance of the statutes, then morally if not legally, they must share the responsibility. It seems going far to draw a conclusion but it is just.

LEADERSHIP FOR BOYS

Organizations for boys are one of the typical ideas of the times. A great army of youngsters will gather this fall in the Boy Scouts, Woodcraft league, Knights of King Arthur and so on. The Boy Scouts of America alone include 200,000 members. The time when the boy used to sit down under the evening lamp and read the Rollo books has gone by. To keep him out of the loafing hangouts, he has been turned into a young clubman.

But, it's one thing to get the boys into some of the many useful societies, and it's quite another to have it work out some positive benefit. Leaders of the Boy Scout movement report great difficulty in securing "scoutmasters." To fill this lack they are starting at Boston this fall a school for scout leadership and receiving applications for membership from all over the country.

As things now are, many of these boy organizations run in a haphazard fashion. Very few men have the gift for work with boys. Young America is a tough problem to handle. He thinks quick. He has a very keen sense of humor. He feels a desire to utter his witticisms at the most inopportune times. His little spirit boils over with fun, and he wants to make a game of all drill or class work.

The average man has to think very actively to subdue these resourceful minds and squirming muscles. It takes an alert brain an ingenius imagination, a tolerant spirit and a firm will. Most men feel utterly exhausted after an evening of it.

There is great need for organizations to keep the boys off the streets and to provide outlet for their superfluous energy. A man who has a gift for this kind of leadership can do untold good. The ministers, church workers and school teachers will have to make more of a study of this work. Probably the clergyman can exert more influence in this way than by the most exhaustive study of theology —New Castle Herald.

GINGLES' JINGLES

The most callous of men is the guy who can spiel a poem a day to be read by thousands of people who choke down the stuff with the whisper, I wish he were dead. CONGRESS SEATS ARE IMPORTANT

Pennsylvania Should Send Solid Delegation to Washington.

CHAIRMAN CROW GIVES REASON

Calls Attention to Necessity of National Legislators Who Favor Protection and Other Republican Policies Twenty-five State Senators to be Elected in This State.

STATE CHAIRMAN CROW.

Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—Republicans of Pennsylvania have awakened to the necessity of sending to Washington and Harrisburg legislators who are Republicans and will vote for the advancement of the principles and policies of the party. Information received at the headquarters of the Republican state committee shows that county leaders and their lieutenants are giving special attention to this matter of electing congressmen, state senators and representatives in the general assembly. No stone is to be left unturned to bring victory to candidates for these offices.

Chairman Crow feels that above everything else Pennsylvania should have a solid Republican delegation at Washington. A president without a congress of the same political faith is powerless. He may recommend that certain things be done, but has no assurance that any of his recommendations will be carried out or his wishes respected in the slightest degree. It becomes imperative, therefore, that a Republican congress should be elected to support and co-operate with the Republican president, whose election apparently is no longer in doubt.

"Why Pennsylvanians should even consider for a moment the sending of Democrats to congress is beyond me," said Chairman Crow yesterday. "Our state is peculiarly a protection state. We have mineral wealth, farming resources and manufacturing industries of every sort and they all require protection. If this protection is not given their activities are prostrated.

Look to Future.

"I am not speaking now of the present, when the entire order of things is changed by reason of the European war and the artificial boom that followed it in some parts of the country. We must look to the future, to the period that will follow the war when the condition of the world becomes normal. It is then that the Democratic policy of near free trade will hit the industries of the United States and especially those located in the great commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

"It is not difficult to see why voters in the southern states elect Democrats to congress. That section of the country is saturated with the doctrine of free trade. To the average citizen of southern states protection is a snare and a fraud and should be displaced by a policy which would open our gates to cheaply-made European goods.

"But here in Pennsylvania we differ from those who live below the Mason and Dixon line. Our splendid industries have been built up through protection and under a strong protective tariff our workingmen have prospered. Under these circumstances it is the height of folly for Pennsylvania to send to Washington any Democratic congressmen. They are compelled to vote as their party dictates and it is unnecessary to say that the foundation of their party is free trade.

Senators and Representatives.

"For the above reason chiefly, I trust that Pennsylvania Republicans, as well as electors who are not Republicans but who feel that our state manufacturing establishments and toilers should be protected, will vote for the Republican nominees for congress in the various districts of the commonwealth.

"Second only to the election of Republican congressmen is the election of Republican nominees for senator and representatives in the general assembly. Party measures constantly come before the law-making body at Harrisburg and it is essential that the Republicans be in control. In short, the best thing for Republicans to do is to vote the ticket straight and to go forth and induce men of other political affiliations to turn in this year for the G. O. P. nominees."

Voters of Pennsylvania will in November choose thirty-six congressmen, twenty-five state senators and 207 representatives in the general assembly. The senators are chosen in the odd-numbered senatorial districts.

This Year's Ballot.

This year's ballot will contain several hundred names. Presidential electors of the several parties will take up considerable space and then will come the nominees for United States senator, state treasurer, auditor general and congressmen-at-large in the order named. Following this will be printed the candidates for congress, state senator in the odd-numbered districts and state representatives. There will be an extra position on the ballot for the candidates for supreme court judge, who were named by the nonpartisan system and who will have to be voted for separately, that is independent of any party.

The Republican candidate for president, Charles E. Hughes, will make two speeches in Pennsylvania this campaign. One of these will be delivered in Pittsburgh tomorrow and the other in Philadelphia early in October. The Philadelphia speech will be under the auspices of the Union League.

Let's Pass Prosperity Around

"Our community has joined hands with thousands of other communities in the United States to increase the nation's prosperity and at the same time distribute it so that all will be benefited.

We are all dependent upon each other. No one class can gain at the expense of all the others. The factories cannot run without market for their goods.

"The employees cannot live without this market. The farmer can make no money if there is none to buy his surplus products. As the farmer prospers, all prosper. As other commercial interests of the country prosper, the farmer prospers. We all must look to each other for our livings.

"If we can turn into the channels of business the millions of dollars we all owe each other, so that we can again use these dollars to buy more things we need– every man who is supplying a need will prosper.

"That is the object of NATIONAL PAY UP WEEK, October 2nd to 7th.

"YOU CAN HELP and you can be helped if you pay up during this week. The business men of Charleroi, have pledged themselves to pay their bills at this time. Let's all work together.

A nice window display is indeed a good advertisement but it is out of the question to carry it into every home. The people must come to it.

The Charleroi Mail enters every home in this and surrounding vicinity and your merchandise and prices if advertised in it's columns will get before the buyer's notice in a manner that is bound to bring results.

MONONGAHELA MAN IS HIT BY AUTO BUS

Vincent Capria, aged 50 years of Park avenue, Monongahela was bruised and cut about 8:30 o'clock Wednesday night when struck by a heavily loaded automobile bus operated between Monongahela and Hazelkirk. Joseph Fitzsimmons was driver. It seems that Capria stepped off in front of the machine as the latter was turned into Park avenue at Main street. Capria was taken to the Memorial hospital.

Bargaining In Arabia.

A missionary was bargaining one day with an Arab stonecutter.

"Give me $7 a boatload," said the Arab.

"That is too much," replied the missionary. "You only charge $6 to your fellow Arabs, and they make you wait for your money. I pay spot cash."

"Yes, but you ought to be glad to get it for seven," said the stonecutter. "You do not know how much my fellow Arabs despise me for dealing with you at all, because you are an infidel, you know."

The Arabs are all Mohammedans and to murder a Christian a man is sure of an infidel they think him to be. Missionaries were unwelcome in that country. Only by their medical work did they get any foothold at all. There have perhaps been fewer converts there than on any other mission field. But missions have been established there less than thirty years. Sometimes several generations of missionaries live and work and die so that their successors may see the fruit of the labors of them all.—World Outlook.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it has an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello." "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile."

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

The mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
—2 Henry VI., 1, 26.

Conflicting Duties.

The most difficult thing in life seems to me to recognize which is the higher of two conflicting duties, and those to whom it is easiest must have. I think, not only the most happiness, but genius. If goodness were always quite simple, what could be more delightful than to be good always? It is, however, a sad thing, when the understanding and the affections are at variance, when one has to stop and consider which of two courses is morally incumbent on one, and without always finding a solution. It is sad, because it shakes one's faith in that which ought to be the surest of guides—namely, in one's own conscience. And, let one choose what he will, it leaves in his mind a sting, something to regret.—Paul Heyse.

Dangerous Locality.

"Now, if this proposition appeals to you, sign here," said the brisk agent at the end of a half hour harangue.

"I didn't say it appealed to me," answered the man at the desk.

"No, but I saw an expression of pleased interest in your face."

"Oh, that wasn't due to anything you said. I just happened to remember that Mike, our head porter, is due here in about three minutes. The last time he put an agent out the fellow was carried to a hospital. Oh, must you go? Well, good morning."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Notaries Public.

Notaries public are said to have been appointed by the primitive Christians to collect such facts as were obtainable about the martyrs of the first century. The office afterward took a legal form and had to do with the attesting of deeds and other writings.—New York American.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Typhoid Fever.

The question, Who should be vaccinated against typhoid fever? has recently been answered by a noted physician of this country. He says all who come under the following heads should be vaccinated against typhoid, as their positions largely increase their chances for contracting it: Drummers and railroad men; all vacationists, especially campers; people who travel much; practicing physicians and nurses; all people who live in towns and small cities; people who live in the country; people who live in a town or community where typhoid is epidemic; people who eat at various hotels and restaurants; people who have no means of knowing whether their food has been free from flies and filth, and finally all people who have not big bank accounts or who have loved ones dependent on them. The doctor does not say as much, but he evidently means to include the whole world, for fear somebody will willfully be left out.

Another doctor who does not want to be responsible for any person's remaining unvaccinated and contracting typhoid fever and perhaps dying says that there are only two classes of people whom he does not advise to take the treatment—the dead and those who have already been vaccinated.

Running A Gantlet

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

A number of Britishers were recently talking about the question of England's maintaining a supremacy over the Suez canal when one of them said:

"They may be able to take it away from us by force of arms, but they can't do it by process of law."

"How so?" asked one of the party.

"I was a member of the British embassy at Berlin when the ambassador received a cipher telegram from London saying that a big block of stock of the Suez canal had been offered for sale at Cairo. He was directed to send some one there to make the purchase at any price. He called me into his private office, showed me the dispatch and told me to leave at once to do the job. He said further that if our force would be glad to control the canal in this way, and if it were known to the others there would be a race as to who would get there first to make the purchase. The Germans would be surely after it. If it were known that I was going to Cairo I might be waylaid by the German secret service. I considered this highly probable, and instead of leaving Berlin in my own proper person I stole out after dark.

"The route I chose was by rail to Genoa, thence by sea to Cairo. On the train in the same compartment with me was a lady who from her cast of features, her dark eyes and hair I set down as being Turkish. She was certainly of an oriental type and a very beautiful woman. It is quite a journey from Berlin to Genoa, and the lady and I were in the same compartment together for a long while. Smoking was not allowed in the compartment, but when at a certain time all had left it but she and I she took out a box of cigarettes and asked me in French—the medium between different nationalities on the continent—if I objected to her smoking. I said no, and she offered me the box. I declined the offer, whereupon she took out one, lighted it and began to smoke.

"My suspicions were aroused by seeing her every few moments apply her handkerchief to her mouth and nose, I fancying that she did so to inhale something on it that would counteract an effect. My suspicions were confirmed by a peculiar odor in the smoke and a languor stealing over me. I attempted to lower a window beside me, but was already so benumbed that I couldn't get it down. I had just enough command of my forces to smash the glass with my fist. The fresh air revived me, and when I turned again to the Turkish lady she, in well affected surprise, said:

"'Monsieur is sensitive to tobacco smoke?'

"'Very,' I replied.

"I was satisfied that she had been sent to delay me, and since by my manner I indicated that I was on my guard she made no further attempt to interfere with me. When we left the train at the border to take another I kept my eye on her and saw her heading for a telegraph office. I did not doubt that she would send a message to announce her failure, and some one else who stood ready would take up her work where she had left off.

"The first night out from Genoa I was walking the deck, taking my usual smoke before turning in. It was quite late, and there were but a few persons still up. I was near the stern of the vessel when a gentleman came from the taffrail and as he reached me stopped and said in French with an Italian accent:

"'The phosphorous illumination in the wake of the ship is very beautiful.'

"Without forethought I went the few yards between me and the taffrail and was looking over when the man who had followed me seized me and lifted me to throw me over. Luckily for me I had been an athlete at home, being fond of cricket, rowing and especially wrestling. My man was very strong, but I withstood his efforts.

"The next morning"—

"Hold on. What did you do with the other fellow?" asked one of the listeners.

"When I tell a story," replied the narrator, "I tell the story as I wish to tell it, and I don't feel obliged to answer questions."

"Oh, go on."

"The next morning and all the rest of the time that I was on the ship I kept my room. I had become satisfied that some power—mind you, I don't say it was German—had let loose its bloodhounds to tear me to pieces if necessary to keep me from Cairo, and I didn't care to give any more of them an opportunity.

"I reached Cairo at night and, going to a hotel, went to bed thankful that I was not tossed about a corpse in Mediterranean waters. I would have enjoyed a good sleep had I not feared some spy with murderous intent was under my bed. As it was, I merely dozed and the next morning after breakfast went out to get a conveyance to take me to my destination. A jehu drove up, but before committing myself to his care I scrutinized him. In a twinkling I saw that he wore a wig and a false beard.

"'Thanks, no,' I said to him. 'I've met several of your friends already and have no desire to hobnob with any of you.'

"I walked to the place I wished to go, and before I left it the British government owned that block of stock. When I made the return journey I slept all the way. No one was interested in me."

CHARLEROI GIRL NOW PERFORMING IN MOVIES

Olive Thomas has a big ambition for a diminutive girl. It is to be the greatest motion picture actress in the world. Miss Thomas is now appearing as visiting star in support of Harry Fox and Grace Darling in several episodes of the photoplay series, "Beatrice Fairfax." She has won unstinted praise not only for the beautiful manner in which she "screens," but for the wonderful dramatic ability she has displayed.

"All of my previous theatrical experience has been acquired in musical comedies," explained Miss Thomas, "and I never realized until I joined the present forces what a really great field the motion pictures offer. Many persons imagine that all one has to do in motion pictures is to look pretty. But I honestly believe that greater talent is required in motion picture work than in the spoken drama."

Miss Thomas is a native of Charleroi but the smoke and grime of the great industrial community did not prevent her from becoming a beautiful woman. She spent all of her childhood in and around Pittsburg, having lived in another suburb, Glassport, for several years. She was sixteen years old when she landed in New York. That was—well, it was four years ago, but you would never think to look at "Ollie," as her friends all call her that she has reached the advanced age of 20.

For two years prior to her first movie work Miss Thomas was with the Ziegfeld Follies and attracted wide attention by her grace, charm and beauty.

ENSILAGE CUTTER TAKES OFF FINGER OF MAN HIP BY HIP

While feeding an ensilage cutter at his home today, a glove on the left hand of Harry Morris, well known farmer of near Lover, was caught in the machine. Gradually it was drawn into the teeth. He was able to keep all but his index finger out of the whirling cutter. It was cut off piece by piece until nearly three-fourths of it had been taken off. He was brought to the Memorial hospital at Monongahela for treatment.

You don't have to coax the children to eat plenty of N. B. C. Graham Crackers. These are not only rich in the nourishment that builds bone and muscle, but their tempting taste makes the little appetites hungry for more.

N. B. C. Graham Crackers added an individuality and nut-like flavor that other graham crackers lacked. This makes them an almost universally popular article of everyday diet.
